

Who Are Camouflaged Learning?

Now in their 14th year, Camouflaged Learning are the UK's premier provider of interactive and experiential educational experiences.

Over the past 14 years, Camouflaged Learning have designed and delivered exciting, engaging and challenging projects to over 450 schools and 109 multi-national businesses and charities, working with over 295,000 students and families to universally positive acclaim.

Every project that Camouflaged Learning produces is an exhilarating educational experience that informs, invigorates and inspires students on matters of mathematics, science, engineering, technology, enterprise, teamwork, communication, resilience, rigour, confidence, employability skills and much, much more.

Critically however, the students who take part in Camouflaged Learning's activities don't realise this: all they see is that they've been tasked to undertake an enjoyable, seemingly impossible, real-world challenge that they cannot wait to be immersed in. And, while they're focusing on that, secretly and without realising it, they're learning.

Camouflaged Learning strongly believe in their philosophy of Learning Through Doing, and are passionate about ensuring multi-faceted, long-lasting, meaningful outcomes for every single event they deliver.

With over 30 employees, Camouflaged Learning have a combined expertise of backgrounds in education, teaching, enterprise, innovation, engineering, research, science, training and public policy. This distinctive mix enables them to provide a full, in-house service for all of their customers.

Camouflaged Learning's clients include: The Royal Air Force, The Royal Academy of Engineering, The Royal Society of Chemistry, Tomorrows Engineers, The Royal Society of Pathology, CEFAS, BBC, ITN, Lotus Cars, The Institute of Mechanical Engineers, The Institute of Engineering & Technology, STEMNET, Thales, STEM Creatives, The Big Bang Fair, Bloodhound SSC and many, many more.

What Can We Offer?

Camouflaged Learning offers a large catalogue of World of Work & Enterprise interventions, allowing you to select from a variety of themed activities containing the vital curriculum elements, delivered via a menu of real-world narratives and innovative delivery methodologies. All activities are designed to maximise impact and indelibility, via high-energy, hands-on, experiential interventions, and will actively engage both students and teachers alike with a positive, transformational, shared educational experience.

Crucially, Camouflaged Learning projects are also designed to be both reactive and flexible, so as to allow their personalisation, in accordance with each school's individual needs. It is our experience that whilst the need for World of Work & Enterprise education is global, each school also has specific, individual needs, so we create capacity for our response to be similarly personalised, in accordance with each school's unique characteristics (geographical, representational, societal, behavioural, etc.).

Camouflaged Learning staff are extensively experienced in working with hard-to-reach or traditionally disengaged groups, and are therefore further able to tailor both approach and content in accordance with individual school requirements/student needs.

How Do We Do it?

Camouflaged Learning's methodology is simple: everything we deliver must be both real and relevant.

However, unlike other organisations, we do not deliver workshops wherein students are limited to fractional, perfunctory, rigorously classroom-bound version of the work place. Instead, Camouflaged Learning create immersive, inspiring, engaging real-world encounters, that cause students to further their understanding of their own capabilities, the opportunities their locality offers them, and- critically- authentic experience of what exactly will be required of them in the wider world of work.

With this methodology in mind, every Camouflaged Learning World of Work intervention not only includes a rich and robust curriculum enhancement agenda, but also aims to enhance skills of team-working, problem-solving, communication, interaction, confidence, creativity, courage and resilience.

An example of one such project might task students to consider the repercussions of an impending Tsunami, and the survival of both themselves and their community requires students to work collaboratively and creatively, using innovative communication strategies, problem solving skills and enhanced knowledge of local resources and expertise. The iterated application of such unfamiliar scenarios have proven to lead to the development of rigour and resilience, via an immersive, enjoyable progression pathway, that also allows students to audit and reconsider their own abilities/ qualities/ practices.

Further examples of our project range can be found on our website, but if you cannot find something suitable don't hesitate to get in touch. Our online offerings are only a fraction of what we have available, and we pride ourselves on our bespoke project creation facilities.

What Are the Outcomes?

Every World of Work/ Enterprise student activity Camouflaged Learning delivers ensures increased awareness of career and work opportunities in their local area/ in the wider world, and an enhanced understanding of the connection between personal interests and skills, and the correlation between education qualifications and work opportunities.

Additionally, Camouflaged Learning also aim to offer schools assistance in suggesting relevant work that can be undertaken before and after the event to maximise curriculum links and impact, and also advise schools on how to engage parents in careers conversations.

Post-event, Camouflaged Learning also offer advice on embedding World of Work/Enterprise activities into their future careers and curriculum planning, with a view to creating project sustainability and autonomy from potential future funding reductions.
